Galicia is a region in the northwest of Spain. Its geography is dotted with valuable natural resources, a rich biodiversity and numerous elements of cultural heritage that make it possible to understand and appreciate the culture, traditions and history of the region. It is also a region closely linked to the sea and its crafts: the Galician coastline, articulated by numerous estuaries, stretches for 1,498 kilometres. In addition to unique natural landscapes, Galicia has cities that are international tourist destinations, a rich cultural heritage and a unique gastronomic experience.

Indeed, Galicia is a surprising destination for those who discover its attractions. The traveller who chooses Galicia will be captivated by the diversity of an offer that includes four UNESCO World Heritage Sites: The Tower of Hercules, the Walls of Lugo, the old town and Cathedral of Santiago de Compostela, or the Way of St James itself, as well as other attractive potential resources such as the Maritime-Terrestrial National Park of the Atlantic Islands of Galicia or the Ribeira Sacra. Galicia is also the land of water, with 40% of Spain's forests and the highest number of rivers in the peninsula.

enjoy Galicia?*

Galicia offers an infinite number of unique, exclusive and singular experiences that can be enhanced with the help of professionals in the sector. There are numerous local incoming travel agencies specialised in designing itineraries that immerse travellers in the essence of the region, highlighting the professionalism and quality of their services.

The best Incoming travel agencies

Unique accommodations

In Galicia, there are different types of accommodation: exclusive boutique hotels located in the middle of nature or in picturesque villages, rural establishments where the visitor can experience traditional Galician architecture, and even charming cottages where visitors can get away from it all surrounded by native flora and fauna... Travellers can even stay in old lighthouses that have been converted into hotels! In addition, Galicia boasts a considerable mineral and medicinal wealth: there are more than 300 catalogued springs, 20 of which are used by spas, as well as numerous wellness centres. This makes it an ideal destination for thermal and wellness tourism.

Galicia is renowned for its gastronomy, which ranges from the traditional to the avant-garde, as well as for its five Denominations of Origin. Travellers will be able to discover traditional Galician cuisine, as well as innovative proposals from affiliated restaurants that use local, top-quality products from the region.

They can also enjoy unique visits to wineries, accompanied by the best local wines and the best professionals in the field, experts in the region's historic winemaking culture.

Unmatched Gastronomy

Complementary Activities in Unique Environments

The estuaries (sea inlets that penetrate the land) outline the profile of Galicia along its nearly 1,650 km of coastline, hosting more than 700 beaches. Therefore, any traveller visiting Galicia should take advantage of the numerous activities linked to the sea and its crafts: boat trips navigating through its estuaries, combining culture, tradition, and gastronomy; visits to typical fishing villages or offers that allow travellers to firsthand experience the fishing profession and its techniques, guided by local fishermen and shellfish gatherers, which occur in the Galician estuaries, as well as activities in ports, fish markets, and even canning factories.

Selecta Traveler

There is a place in this world where active living and luxury experiences meet. It is the place where we design our journeys. We call it the Vertex. And these are its laws:

1. Selecta is not a travel agency. Or, at least, it is not a travel agency like the old ones. It is a concept. It is the idea that there is a point where mentally and physically active travel and the most refined experiences of rest, comfort and disconnection converge. Great journeys set us free.
2. Bespoke means tailor-made. We work to take other people to places where they can find themselves, forgetting about package tours and building with them the journeys of their lives.
3. Life is only real when we really feel. It is no longer about where you want to go or what you want to see, but about what you want to experience. And about the mark you want to leave. What we want is for the footprint to be a gift, for the traveller and for the receiver.
4. The horizon is for walking. Fernando Birri said it first: the horizon, the utopia, moves away as we get closer so that we keep moving forward. An expanding horizon is, at least, a propitious place for new extraordinary destinations and stories to tell. And an inescapable invitation to explore.
